

What is a trademark?

A trademark means any sign which can be represented graphically, and which is capable of distinguishing in the market goods, services, industrial and commercial establishments, of one undertaking from those of other undertakings so as to guarantee to the consumer the identity or origin of the goods, services, industrial and commercial establishments to which it is applied.